THE DAY THE VEGETABLES CAME TO SCHOOL

Venkatramana Gowda
Padmanabh
THE DAY THE VEGETABLES CAME TO SCHOOL

Text: Venkatramana Gowda
Illustrations: Padmanabha
English Translation: Dr. Divaspathy Hegde

This book belongs to

_______________________

_______________________
One morning not so long ago, Raju was on his way to school as usual. He loved school and was walking along happily, looking forward to the day.

That was when he saw something very strange: ahead of him were some unusual shapes, heading towards school themselves, schoolbags slung over their shoulders.
As he came closer to the shapes, Raju wondered if they were vegetables, the kind he had seen so often in the market. He rubbed his eyes in disbelief.
The vegetables looked fresh and healthy. They were marching towards school like little soldiers, one behind the other.
Raju walked faster and faster. He was full of curiosity about his new schoolmates, and wanted a closer look at them.
At long last, Raju caught up with the shapes marching ahead of him. He stared at their faces, mouth open in surprise.
Just as he had guessed, the shapes were really vegetables: potatoes, sweet potatoes, yams, and all the other root vegetables he had seen in the market.
“What? Is it really you?” The question popped out of his mouth before he realized it.
The vegetables did not reply. They just looked at each other and smiled, amused at his amazement.
"Where are you going?" asked Raju in wonder. "Where else?" replied the vegetables, speaking together as one. "We're on our way to your school!"

Raju nodded. He didn't know what to say. He continued on his way to school.
A little while later, Raju looked back to see if the vegetables were still around. That was when he had his second surprise of the morning. A parade of green leafy vegetables had now joined the root vegetables. They were also marching towards his school, their schoolbags over their shoulders.
Now that he was part of the parade himself, Raju's joy knew no bounds. No one he knew had ever gone to school as part of a vegetable parade before!
By and by, the parade reached the school. All the children came to the door to watch the strange procession. Their mouths fell open at the sight. Their eyes were round with astonishment.
Raju's teacher came forward to welcome them. "Good boy!" she said, patting Raju on the back. Raju was delighted. "Thank you, teacher," he said happily. The other children clapped and cheered.
The teacher left but someone continued to pat him, and quite hard too. Raju opened his eyes. His mother was shaking him awake, saying, "Wake up, Raju! You're going to be late for school."

Raju was fully awake now. "I've been dreaming," he said to himself. "What a strange dream I've had!" Raju got out of bed, smiling to himself. He would have to hurry if he wanted to get to school on time.
Use your imagination and colour this picture any way YOU like.
Use your imagination and colour this picture any way YOU like.
Raju cannot believe his eyes. On his way to school, he sees vegetables of all shapes and sizes also headed there, carrying their schoolbags and water bottles! What’s more, no one else, including his teacher, seems surprised to see them. Whatever is going on?

Titles in the series:
Grandpa Fish And The Radio • The Sparrow And The Fruit • The Rainbow Fish • The Day The Vegetables Came To School • The Koel’s Song
The Generous Crow • Ruby Red, Rosy Red • Row, Row, Row Your Boat • Moo Moo Brown Crow • The Hare and the Tortoise (Again!)

Learning to read – level by level. This is a Level 3 book.

Beginning to Read/Read Aloud
For very young children who are eager to begin reading and listening to stories

Learning to Read
For children who recognize familiar words and can read new words with help

Reading Proficiently
For older children who can read with confidence

Reading Independently
For children who are ready to read on their own

Pratham Books is a not-for-profit organization that publishes books in multiple Indian languages to promote reading among children.

www.prathambooks.org

The Day The Vegetables Came To School
(English)
MRP: ₹ 35.00

ISBN 978-81-8263-139-7